How Community Based Participatory Research is Helping to Reduce Health Disparities in Tulsa

Mike Stout, Ph.D.
George Kaiser Family Foundation Chair in Family and Community Policy
Dept. Human Development and Family Science

Friday, October 27th
12:15 pm - 1:15 pm
Main Hall 2227, OSU-Tulsa

Light lunch provided at noon. Simulcast to

Objectives:
1. To understand how community based participatory research (CBPR) can inform and facilitate large scale community problem solving initiatives.
2. To provide insights into the link between social determinants of health and health disparities.
3. To provide insights into ways interested scholars can engage in collaborative partnerships with organizations and volunteers to maximize the "real-world" impact of their research.

Seminar Series sponsored by OSU’s Dept. of HDFS

Center for Family Resilience, OSU-Tulsa

Questions? Contact Dr. Harrist, Amanda.harrist@okstate.edu

NOTE: Fall Break is the 3rd Friday of October so the CFR Research Seminar has been RESCHEDULED for the 4th Friday of October.